Man rescued from MBTA tracks

Surveillance video released by the MBTA Thursday shows a passenger falling onto Orange Line tracks at North Station before being rescued by bystanders.

The incident happened around 9 p.m. Wednesday, according to T spokesman Joe Pesaturo, who said the man was never in danger of being hit by a train, as a bystander immediately informed an Orange Line dispatcher of the situation.

It's not clear why the man stepped off the platform, and whether he was injured by the fall. METRO

Thousands will 'Unite to Fight' pancreatic cancer

Raising awareness. More than 1,500 people are expected to walk this weekend.

After losing her father in 2010 to a short but valiant battle with pancreatic cancer, a California runner-turned-"marathon goddess" is pushing forward with her effort to fight a destructive disease in Boston.

"There is no early detection method out there; that's why it's so devastating," said Julie Weiss, 42, who will lead the Boston Scientific team at Saturday's Unite to Fight Pancreatic Cancer walk. "You don't even have a fighting chance. So we're all coming together to spread an abundance of awareness and hopefully make a difference."

Hosted by the Lustgarten Foundation and Pancreatic Cancer Action Network, the walk will bring together businesses, organizations, individuals and families affected by the disease to raise $400,000 and awareness for pancreatic cancer.

The event kicks off at 10 a.m. at Mother's Rest Park in South Boston. About 1,500 walkers were registered for the event as of Thursday evening; however, more were expected to sign up by Saturday.

"This really brings a face to this disease. It's about saving these people. Giving everyone a chance," said Weiss, who ran 52 marathons in 52 weeks between March 2012 and March 2013 to raise money for the cause. So far she has netted nearly $200,000, but she hopes to raise as much as $1 million.

"I did something dramatic, but people don't have to run to make a difference. Make a donation or spread awareness," said Weiss. "We are really in this fight together."

Pancreatic cancer stats

- Pancreatic cancer is the fourth leading cause of cancer death in the United States, and is estimated to become the second leading cause of death by the year 2020.
- There are 44,000 cases diagnosed each year in the U.S. Genetic or hereditary causes of pancreatic cancer account for only 5-10 percent of cases.
- Only 6 percent of people have a survival rate of more than five years.
- The risk of developing pancreatic cancer increases sharply after age 50.
- Long-term smoking cessation of at least 10 years reduces the risk by about 30 percent compared to the risk of current smokers.

Amtrak cancels Acela Express service

Acela Express service to New York City has been suspended through Sunday. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

A commercial power problem in the New York area has forced Amtrak to cancel its Acela Express service between New York and Boston through at least Sunday, the railroad announced Thursday.

New England Regional train service will operate with additional cars; however, passengers should expect delays of up to 90 minutes due to the use of diesel locomotives.

A high-voltage feeder cable failed Wednesday at a suburban New York station, knocking out power to Metro-North's New Haven Line. The railroad said it will resume normal operations "as quickly and safely as possible" once power is restored, and will announce whether there will be express service on Monday as soon as the information becomes available. Passengers can receive a refund or voucher for future travel, and some reservations can be modified or canceled on Amtrak.com. MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Technical problem

Con Edison crews were working on a cable feeder that failed in Mount Vernon, N.Y. around 5:30 a.m. Wednesday. A second feeder that normally provides service to the New Haven Line was also out of service for scheduled repairs.

Woman's attacker eludes capture in Muddy River

That dirty water. A man avoided being apprehended by jumping into the river.

A man who attacked a woman in Brookline earlier this week was able to avoid police capture by jumping into the Muddy River and floating away.

Brookline police said on Thursday that officers were called to the area of Parkway Road and Brookline Avenue at about 9:30 p.m. Monday for an attempted robbery.

A woman told police she was walking to her car when a man standing nearby said something to her, then grabbed her from behind and tried to drag her toward the Muddy River. A driver who witnessed the attack stopped and tried to help, police said.

That's when the suspect ran toward the river, "dove in and was carried downstream, according to the witness."

Police couldn't find him.

Hunger strike for Suffolk inmates

Nearly 40 inmates detained by Immigrations and Customs Enforcement began a hunger strike Thursday morning to protest poor conditions at the South Bay House of Correction in Boston. The inmates claim that trays, dishes and utensils are poorly cleaned and unsanitary, they don't have access to the law library and they are being held at a facility away from their families. The ACLU of Massachusetts released a statement that said it hopes jail officials take the concerns of the inmates seriously.

An advocacy group said the inmates would go on a prolonged hunger strike if needed. METRO

Mayoral race. Candidates call for three debates before general election

Just off of their preliminary election wins, the candidates vying to become the next mayor of Boston are calling for three televised debates in the mayoral race.

"After discussions between our campaigns, we agree that televised debates will provide an important forum for voters to gain the information they need to make an informed decision in November's mayoral election," the statement said.

A grieving mother fights

Finding meaning.
The mother of a slain teen used his death to create a dialogue for peace in a troubled neighborhood.

Clementina Chery founded the Peace Institute after her son was killed. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Clementina Chery had a choice to make shortly after her 15-year-old son was gunned down in crossfire between gangs in Boston's Dorchester neighborhood.

"For me, the anger and violence was there," she said. "I didn't want to go that route. I wanted to go on the path less traveled."

Chery chose the path of peace following the death of her son, Louis Brown, and founded the Dorchester-based Louis D. Brown Peace Institute.

Her son was killed in 1993 as he walked to a teens-against-gang-violence event one afternoon. It was her son's death, she said, that woke her up.

"My anger was there, my search for revenge was there, but yet who was I going to take revenge out on? Someone who looked just like me? Someone who looked just like my son? So I had to channel my pain and my anger in a way that would be more about rebuilding the community," she said.

The Peace Institute focuses on primary prevention, to stop the seeds of violence before they grow, and peace education as a way to stem violence. It has even developed curriculum for elementary to high school students on how to choose peace over violence in the wake of a crime.

Primary prevention such as peace education and emotional literacy are areas that Chery believes will provide long-term tools for young people and help communities more than "Band-Aid solutions."

For 17 years, the institute has also put on the Mother's Day Walk for Peace through Dorchester. This year, Scarlett Lewis, whose son Jesse was one of the 26 students and educators killed during the shooting in Newtown, Conn., spoke to the crowd.

"If we don't address the emotional, psychological needs of hurt children, then they will become hurtful adults," Chery said.

Guns in our cities

Following the trail of our bloody streets

Boston, Philadelphia and New York City are three different cities with a common problem: Gun violence has destroyed the lives of countless individuals on our streets and wrought devastation across our neighborhoods, searing itself into their fabric.

Paulette Page haunted by mystery of who killed her son

Early last month, two young black men were killed by gun violence. The location of their death — Fort Greene Park in Brooklyn — drew some attention, because over the past decade that neighborhood has grown increasingly expensive and safer.

According to police reports, around 11:26 p.m. on Aug. 9, Anti-Crime Unit officers inside Fort Greene Park heard gunshots and saw a black male, who appeared to be in his late teens and was wearing red shorts and a white baseball cap, running in their direction. The officers saw the individual waving a gun and firing multiple shots in the air. They chased him but lost sight of him outside of the park.

Police said they then received a 911 call around 11:30 p.m. reporting that a person had been shot in Fort Greene Park near the basketball court by Myrtle Avenue. Police arrived to find two victims, Jahmal Page and Javon Anthony Earl-Govon, both 21 years old. Both men were face-down on the ground, each shot once in the head.

Investigators believe the young men may have been part of a group that had some sort of physical altercation with the shooter prior to this fatal double shooting.

Page's mother, Paulette Page, described her son as "a fun-loving person" who played football, rapped, "was into fashion" and "liked music, entertaining people [and] partying." He and Earl-Govon were there with a group of five other friends for a cookout that had carried over to later in the evening.

"I don't know what to say," she said. "He didn't have any enemies out here."

Shortly after the shooting, there was a candlelight vigil on Washington and St. Johns, where Paulette's mother lives.

Paulette has had no updates from police regarding the investigation into her son's death. She said she doesn't understand how there were so many people at the barbecue but there are no leads on the shooter.

Painful memory

Ralphiee Colon, brother of gun victim: 'I'm hurt every day'

Ralphiee Colon holds up a picture of his sister Melanie, who was killed in a shooting. / RIKARD LARMA, METRO

The young mother, then 22, went missing from her North Philly home on May 8, 2012.

Her body was found less than a week later, just before Mother's Day, in a wooded area near Tacony Creek Park.

Like the vast majority of the city's crime-related fatalities, she had been gunned down, shot six times at close range.

Melanie's family still struggles with her death, and with the fact that her killer has not been brought to justice.

"It's almost about to be two years," said Melanie's brother Ralphiee Colon, 18. "But the emotions are still there. I'm hurt every day thinking about it."

He believes his sister would still be with him were it not for the firearms flooding the city's streets.

His motivation is keeping Melanie's memory alive, he said, and searching for answers in her slaying, partly by running a Facebook tribute page with 10,000 "likes."

"At the end of the day, it's what I have to do. I'm OK — I don't want to kill myself because if I kill myself, what would that do? I will go to hell, and I won't see my sister and my mom. So I've got to keep going." ALEX WIGGLESWORTH

OH, OBAMACARE!

For all the campaigning, debating, online articles and on-air interviews about Obamacare, if a person walked down the street asking people what it means to them, the vast majority would say, "I don't have a clue" or "Beats me" or perhaps "What are you doing out here, Mr. Biden?"

At least that's what the polls suggest. A Wall Street Journal/NBC news sampling found that nearly 70 percent of Americans don't understand this law. They don't know how it is going to work, how they'll fit in, or whether it will cover their Cialis prescription. "Hold on, honey. Let's not buy the bathtubs yet!"

This is one of the most sweeping changes to the government's social safety net in our lifetimes, and roughly three-quarters of us don't know what is happening. No wonder President Obama is storming the country trying to convince voters it is a good thing, even as his surrogates say they too are trying to "cut through the noise."

Quoted

By noise, of course, they mean Republican criticism. Or liberal criticism. Or any sound coming from anyone who wants to reconsider, revamp or re-carpet this massive overhaul of how we get our aspirin.

By noise, of course, they mean Republican criticism. Or liberal criticism. Or any sound coming from anyone who wants to reconsider, revamp or re-carpet this massive overhaul of how we get our aspirin. And plenty of people fit that profile. A CBS/New York Times poll found only 39 percent of voters now favor Obamacare. Just over half disapprove of it, including conservatives who think it goes too far, liberals who think it does not go far enough and independents who just think it is too convoluted to work as advertised.

You can hardly blame the White House for wanting to push all those voices aside. To be fair, the president won this fight back when Obamacare was passed by Congress and there is no rule that requires him to get it reapproved now. But there is also no rule that prevents his opponents from trying to make adjustments, especially when so many Americans either don't like the way this law is headed, or get headaches trying to sort out what it will really mean.

Is there a doctor in the house?

Who knows?

Zimmerman's wife has 'doubts' about his innocence

The estranged wife of George Zimmerman said in an NBC TV interview on Thursday that she now doubted his innocence after standing by him during his trial.

Shellie Zimmerman was asked on the NBC Today show if she now doubted that he acted in self-defense on the night that Martin was shot.

"I think anyone would doubt that innocence, because I don't know the person that I've been married to," Shellie Zimmerman said in the interview.

Obama critical of GOP opponents of health care law

Deadline. The government will be forced to shut down on Oct. 1 if a spending measure isn't approved.

President Barack Obama on Thursday lashed out at Republican opponents of the health care law he pioneered right ahead of a key deadline for enrollment and vowed that he would stop attempts to get the program bogged down in an ongoing budget stalemate.

Obama defended the 2010 Affordable Care Act against Republican critics who say it is an example of government gone too far.

"The Affordable Care Act is here to stay," he said. He singled out for ridicule a Republican state lawmaker who said the law is as destructive to personal liberty as the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850, which required captured runaway slaves to be sent back to their owners.

"Think about that: Affordable health care is worse than a law that let slave owners get their runaway slaves back," Obama said. "All of this would be funny if it wasn't so crazy."

The Affordable Care Act is regarded skeptically by a majority of Americans who worry that it will lead to higher health care costs and cut jobs. REUTERS

Online problems

Delay in Spanish language Obamacare websites

The Spanish language version of online exchanges to sign up for health care insurance under the Affordable Care Act will not be ready on Oct. 1 but will be ready "sometime in October," White House spokesman Jay Carney told reporters on Thursday.

"The online portion of it, I believe, will come on sometime in October," Carney said, noting that Spanish-language information and assistance will be available by telephone in the meantime, starting on Oct. 1.

Historic default

Republicans demand Obamacare delay in debt limit increase

House of Representatives Republicans on Thursday refused to give in to President Barack Obama's demands for straightforward bills keeping the government running beyond Sept. 30 and increasing borrowing authority to avoid an historic default.

They said they will seek a one-year delay in the full implementation of the new national health care law known as "Obamacare" in return for raising U.S. borrowing authority by enough to let Treasury borrow through the end of 2014.

Even as some senior Republicans predicted there would be no government shutdown on Oct. 1 or credit default next month, House Speaker John Boehner warned that his chamber is unlikely to sign off on a government spending bill the Senate is expected to pass in coming days that simply extends current funding. REUTERS

Bonus question

Brothers in arms

All brothers squabble, so who causes most of the arguments?

There has never been a fight that's been to the end of the fight. It always gets broken up. So a few punches here, a few punches there. But there's been like glasses thrown against the wall and guitars broken, but you have to understand that this is four people in the same room as each other for 12 years straight. There's been no stabbings or cuttings or anything like that. We've done pretty well.

Post-meltdown, the Followill boys are back in town to sling some "Mechanical Bull."

KINGS OF LEON

THE KINGS' WILD RIDE

At Kings of Leon's pinnacle, they were rock 'n' roll personified: a multiplatinum fourth album, "Only by the Night," in 2008, lingerie models and rumored riders of excess that read like a pharmaceutical shopping list.

Their 2011 mega-tour should have undisputedly confirmed the Followills — brothers Caleb, Jared and Nathan, and cousin Matthew — as rock's royal family. Instead, it ended in self-inflicted regicide, when frontman Caleb delivered this gutter-style mid-show abdication in Dallas: "I'm gonna go backstage, and I'm gonna vomit; I'm gonna drink a beer, and I'm gonna come back out and play three more songs."

He never returned; the tour was over.

But after their two-year hiatus, the Kings are back to reclaim their throne. The Nashville-based band's sixth album "Mechanical Bull" — which dropped on Tuesday — certainly seems a return to form, with all the rawness and frank storytelling lyricism of the band's early albums.

"There's a conscious effort to have a little bit more energy on this album," says bassist Jared Followill, who opens up about childhood rebellion, LSD experimentation and riding a mechanical bull — naturally.

The album is called "Mechanical Bull." Do you have any experiences riding one of those?
A couple. I did one at this party called the Neon Carnival party in California at Coachella. And I'm pretty sure I'm the only one that rode it correctly with one hand in the air. Everybody else was using two hands and would be like, "Man, it's so easy. I stayed up there for like 30 seconds." And it's like — "because you cheated!"

Did you have a beer in your hand?
Yup. And tequila in my mouth.

You've been known to enjoy a drink. Are you a happy drunk or an aggressive drunk?
I'm a weird robot drunk, like, nobody knows when I'm drunk. I can drink a lot and I rarely, rarely ever slur my words, much less fall down or anything like that. I've had conversations with people, and I've been told that I've had conversations with people for like 30 minutes, and I'll wake up and they will tell me what we were talking about and I'll be like, "I do not remember that in the slightest bit." And they're like, "You seemed so sober!" And I'm like, "Dude, I was beyond. I don't remember any of that." So I'm pretty weird — I should probably go to the hospital for that or something.

Was the hedonism of your early days a rebellion against your religious upbringing?
Probably not consciously, but it was definitely like an animal that had been let out of a cage and allowed to roam free. I feel like every single person I know who grew up in the United Pentecostal Church, if they ever get out of it, they go crazy for at least a few years. You'll see them out and they'll either have ridiculous hair or the girls will dress so inappropriately. I don't want to say a word that will get me into trouble, but the girls are completely out there.

Your love of rock music from the early ages stands in stark contrast to church music. Did it form part of your escapism?
Yeah, it was almost in a sense like when you said earlier, "Was the hedonism part of a rebellion?" That wasn't so much consciously as maybe rock music felt rebellious to us. Because growing up, we weren't allowed to listen to anything. Our parents would let us listen to music from the '50s and '60s because a lot of the themes were toned down. But we would hear stuff every once in a while. I remember hearing sneak peeks of Nirvana and stuff at friends' houses and even like being a young kid in fifth or sixth grade hearing Oasis or even Bush and people like that and thinking, "Holy sh—, that is awesome!"

Was the meltdown in 2011 caused by drugs or alcohol?
People think we were huge druggies — we did acid one time. People would see us and be like, "Man, those guys must be on acid. … They're on MDMA." Stuff like that. We would try stuff once to see what it was like and be like, "No, I don't like that. I would rather smoke weed and drink beer."

Tell us about that one time on acid then…
It was awful. There is a good reason I only did it once.

Tell us more. Where was it?
A U2 after-party that ended up being a masquerade ball, which still scars me to this day. It was the scariest place I've ever been. Except for when we walked in, it was a masquerade ball where all the masks started turning into monsters. We said, "That was the worst idea!" I don't think I will ever, ever do it again. At that point, I thought I might repent and go back to church and quit the band.

'I stopped Googling myself'

Interview. Scarlett Johansson discusses "Don Jon" and not caring about being a sex symbol.

"Don Jon" writer-director-star Joseph Gordon-Levitt says he wanted Scarlett Johansson as his co-star in part because she herself has been a victim of a certain amount of objectification. But while Johansson is happy for the implied compliment, she doesn't think she's all that special.

"I think that sure, I've been a victim — if you want to say — of that as much as anybody else. I don't feel particularly affected by that more than any other person in the spotlight, I guess," she says. "But I think it's something that I've used — my own status as a sexiest whatever-you-want-to-call-it or whatever it is, a label you want to put on it. I've been able to use it to my advantage while trying to avoid getting pigeonholed as much as possible. I don't want the work that I do to feel like a reaction to the fact that I'm trying to get away from that."

Speaking of getting away from that, Johansson keeps away from the vast swaths of Internet devoted to her beauty and private life. "I stopped Googling myself," she admits. "Nothing good ever comes out of it. It's best to avoid it. It gives you an inflated idea of yourself as well. You suddenly feel like everybody's paying attention to you all the time." Of course, in her case she might be right — even if the idea still strikes her as odd.

"The other thing is, why do you care? You don't know me," she says. "It always makes me wonder why anybody cares. ... I guess we're all nosy in some way, but it's something that seems unrelated in my mind. I mean, I know people like celebrities and maybe that gives them something to dream about — I don't know."

That's not to say Johansson wants any of that content eradicated — or even regulated in any way. "There are no rules; that's the Internet. There are no rules. You can't impose them; then we'd be living in China," she says. "If you want to have a free country or whatever, you can't impose any regulations on the Internet."

While pal Gordon-Levitt has directed his own feature, Scarlett Johansson won't be far behind. "I'm actually directing a film next summer, which is an adaptation of a [Truman] Capote novella called 'Summer Crossing,'" she says. "It's something I've been working on for what feels like forever. It's been about six years, and we're finally going to do it."

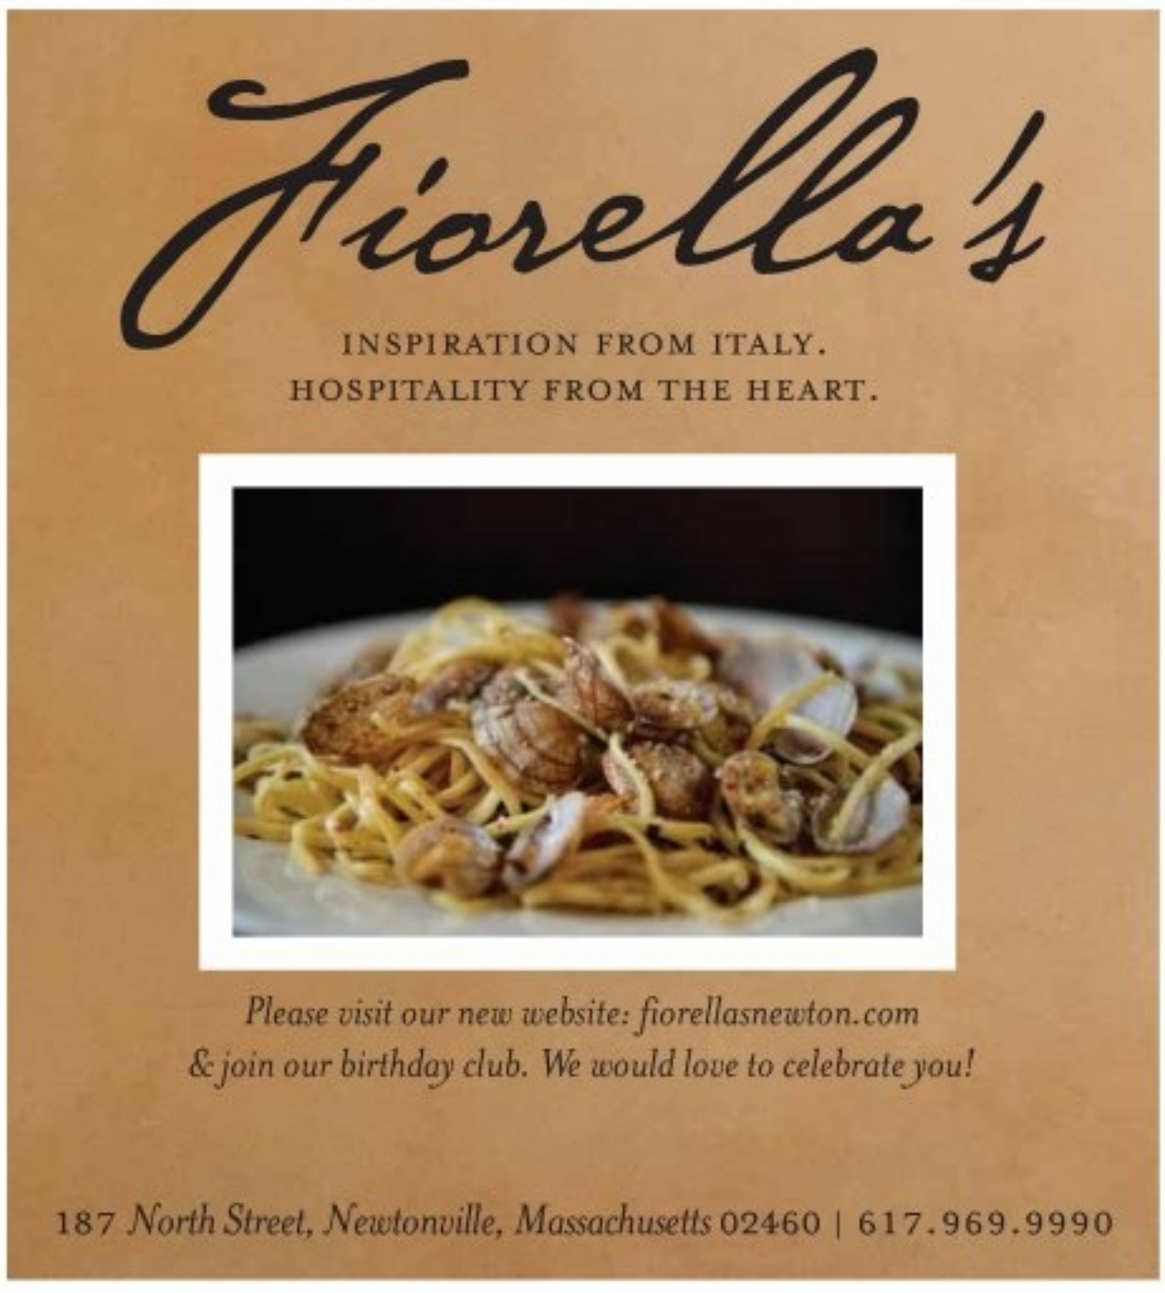
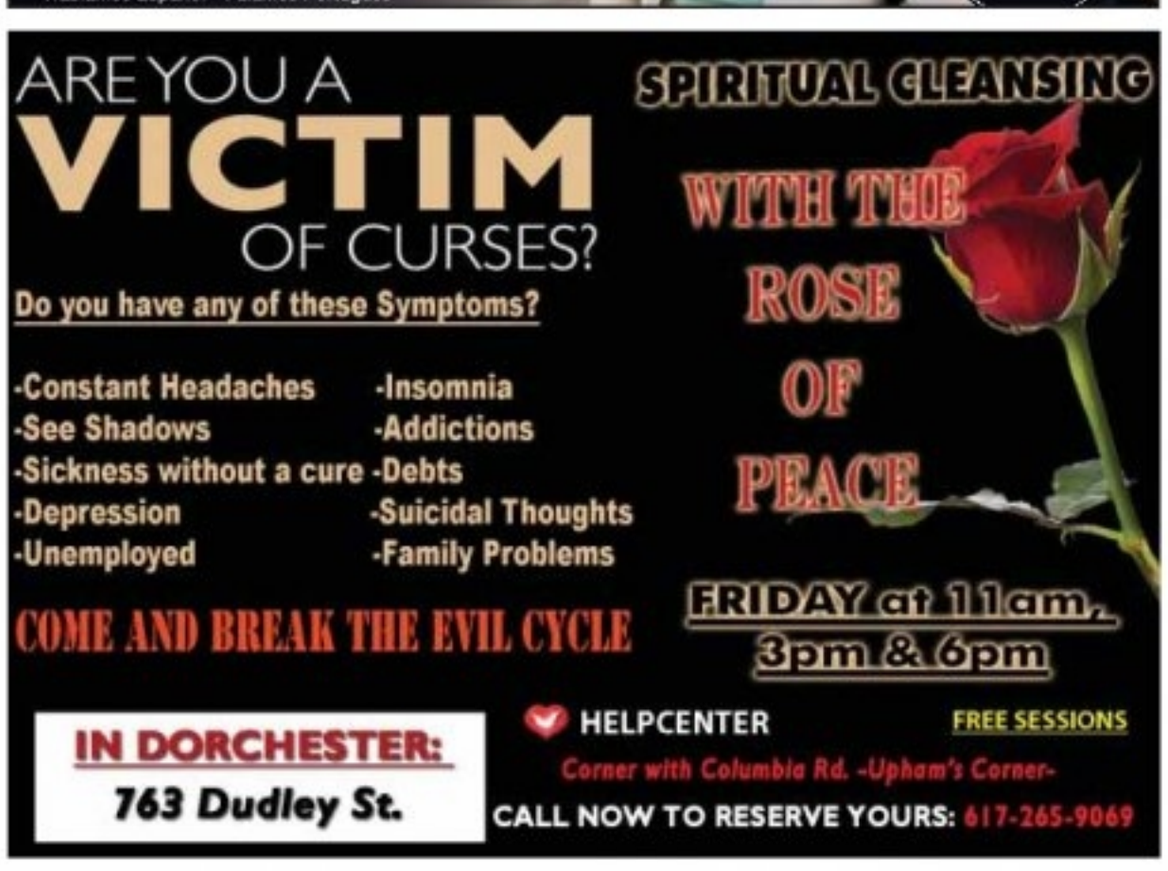
Scarlett Johansson plays a Jersey girl in "Don Jon." / GETTY IMAGES





Joseph Gordon-Levitt's Jersey snore

Sex addict movie.

One of the best actors of his generation, Joseph Gordon-Levitt has long had a sideline making short films and even hosting his own net filmmaking collective, hitRECord. That in no way prepares him for his feature directorial debut, "Don Jon," a keyed-up cavalcade of Jersey grotesques that's energetically made and disappointingly, shockingly shallow. It's hard to believe he's in it, let alone that he made it.

Made up like a diminutive version of the Situation, Gordon-Levitt's oily Jon has enough sly intelligence to justify (via narration) an empty existence, devoted to working out, hanging out and scoring with "dimes" (girls who get a 10). But no sex is as fulfilling to him as beating it to Internet porn — even when that girl is played by Scarlett Johansson.

Like Jon — as well as his family, led by a wife-beater-clad Tony Danza — Johansson's Barbara is a barn-door broad caricature with a sketch comedy accent. Barbara is not only a Jersey stereotype, but a female stereotype — one designed by regressive-minded men. If only Jon had a hot older woman — say, the pot-smoking, randy widow/grieving mom played by Julianne Moore — to teach him the difference between crap sex and making really hot love.

On one hand, it's actually genuinely shocking — refreshing, even — where "Don Jon" winds up. Moore is terrific — the only recognizably real person in a film where every other performer acts like they're in an "SNL" parody of "Saturday Night Fever."

Review

'Don Jon'

Director: Joseph Gordon-Levitt

Stars: Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Scarlett Johansson

Rating: R

As far as recent sex addiction films go ("Shame," "Thanks for Sharing"), it's the thinnest and most judgmental. But when Moore storms in — more funny than fragile, with shocking reservoirs of dry wit and real sexiness — she loosens it up. It's a happy ending of the unintended kind: "Don Jon" almost becomes a good movie.

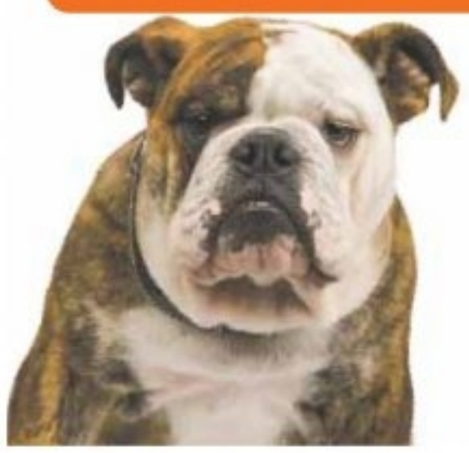
DID YOU KNOW?



Good Fats for Fall

FISH & BONE

NO.8 Cool, dry weather is here! That means our bodies (pets too) need more 'good' fats, like coconut oil, fish oil or hemp oil to combat dry/itchy skin, stay warm, & maintain metabolism. 'Good' fats are also important for cell repair, reproduction, organ function, healthy skin, and they absorb free radicals & fight inflammation (like arthritis). Coconut oil fights yeast & other fungus, aids digestion, and makes a great healing balm. It's also safe for pets with pancreatitis because it doesn't need the pancreas for absorption. So when the temperature drops, provide extra 'good' fats and you'll not only have a healthier pet, you'll see the difference in softness and shine within days.

For more information visit us at the store or on our blog.

tip Choose the best oils you can find, either pure liquid fish oil (& keep it in fridge) or extra virgin organic coconut oil (fine in pantry). Drizzle right on food. Coconut oil is solid below 75 degrees...a spoonful makes a great healthy treat or 'pill pocket'. It also prevents hairballs, aids digestion, & fights infection. Or use it as a natural sunscreen or wound healer.

Street Pianos Boston

September 27 – October 14

For 75 years, Celebrity Series has brought the world's best performing artists to Boston. We're proud of our history of presenting world-renowned performers on Boston's great stages, and Street Pianos Boston builds on this legacy by bringing music of all kinds to the streets of our city. Entitled Play Me, I'm Yours, and created by British artist Luke Jerram, the street pianos project has reached an estimated five million people in more than 40 cities worldwide since it was launched in Birmingham, England in 2008. Street Pianos Boston features the 1000th street piano: the baby grand at City Hall Plaza.

Andre de Shields (King Louie) and Akash Chopra (Mowgli) go wild. / LIZ LAUREN

A lot of monkey business

Review. "The Jungle Book" is a pleasant yet unremarkable romp through the wild.

Though "The Jungle Book" has many good moments, the Huntington Theatre Company's latest production lacks the magic that should sweep you out of your seat and into an enchanting journey to an exotic land.

This adaptation of the 1967 Disney film (and stories of Rudyard Kipling) feels more like a series of loosely connected vignettes than a captivating tale of a young boy's adventure. Some are great, some not so much, but they all suffer from a lack of continuity.

For starters, the setup feels awkward. When Mowgli, the little boy (man-cub) at the center of the story, first encounters the wolves, there's a scene in which they howl gratingly — and for far too long. It's a family-friendly musical, perhaps a catchy song would have done the trick?

As Mowgli wanders through the jungle, he encounters a series of animals, each offering a life lesson that will lead him to the human village. Among the best of these meetings is with Baloo the bear (Kevin Carolan) whose "Bare Necessities" is one of the show's finest, and most engaging, musical moments.

The real showstopper, however, belongs to King Louie (Andre De Shields), the leader of the mischievous group of monkeys that kidnaps Mowgli. The Broadway vet and company elder statesman nearly blows the roof off the place with "I Wanna Be Like You" — itself worth the price of admission.

While the set is lacking in inspiration, Mara Blumenfeld's costumes are, at times, breathtaking. The show also boasts phenomenal musicians that deliver blues with a wonderful Indian twist.

Even the Bollywood-style finale, however, isn't enough for "Jungle Book" to be more than a pleasant, yet inconsistent, journey.

Daryl Hannah has autism

Daryl Hannah, star of "Kill Bill," "Splash" and pretty much the entire '80s, is autistic, she has revealed.

The actress was diagnosed with autism as a child, and she struggled with "debilitating shyness" throughout her career. She fought to hide her condition from her Hollywood employers, and often refused to give interviews and make promotional appearances, "not because I was above it, but because I was terrified," she says.

Hannah says she's doing better now. She spends much of her time on environmental activism and has a boyfriend, a farm and a pet pig. "I've learned a couple of things that really would've made my life easier if I'd known them 20 years ago," she told People.

"I wasted so much time scared, self-conscious and insecure."

It's remarkable to hear a star talk so openly about this kind of illness — though autism has become something of a buzzword in the last few years, it's still surprising to hear a star admit she has it. It seems like only yesterday that celebrities only suffered from two things: exhaustion and dehydration.

Lively wants to curate your life

Do you ever think, "You know what my puny little existence needs? A curator." Well, you're in luck: Blake Lively wants to direct your life.

"It's launching in a few months and I'm really, really thrilled," the actress tells British Vogue about her mysterious new company. "It's about living a one-of-a-kind, curated life, and how to achieve that. There's nothing like it out there."

Someone needs to work on her elevator pitch, as that makes no sense whatsoever.

Pitt and LaBeouf went camping

Brad Pitt, Shia LaBeouf and three other "Fury" castmembers were "ordered to go camping together" recently in the English countryside in preparation for the film, according to Us Weekly. "They play soldiers in the same World War II troop, and the director [David Ayer] wanted to make sure they bonded," a source says. "So he dropped them in the wilderness — without their cell phones."

I like how "without their cell phones" seems so ominous in this item. Like, how did they live through the night?! They survived a camping trip with no (gasp!) cell phones? What sacrifice! Give all of these men Oscars immediately!

MICHAEL DOUGLAS

Michael Douglas didn't share his birthday with Zeta-Jones

Michael Douglas and Catherine Zeta-Jones share a birthday, but this year they didn't share it together, according to E! News. Douglas, who turned 69 Wednesday, was still in Los Angeles following his big win at the Emmys Sunday, while Zeta-Jones is believed to have celebrated her 44th birthday in China. The recently separated couple are still "taking some time apart to evaluate and work on their marriage."

Hamm downplays throat surgery

Jon Hamm is undergoing throat surgery, but it's not so bad, he told Jimmy Kimmel during an interview. "I've got a polyp on my vocal chord," Hamm explains. "It's not as bad as how the National Enquirer reported it, which was that I was coughing up blood and probably have cancer. I was like, 'That's good to put out there. Thanks, guys.'"

CONTRARY TO WHAT YOU MIGHT HAVE READ, JON HAMM DOESN'T HAVE CANCER.

Korn play The Palladium in Worcester on Sept. 28. / SEBASTIEN PAQUET

A real 'Paradigm Shift' for Korn

Interview. Jonathan Davis talks new fans, old times and happy returns.

Jonathan Davis isn't too concerned about creating a commercially successful album these days.

"We don't get worked up over that anymore since we've already established ourselves," says the Korn singer. "If you want to buy our record, buy it. If not, that's cool. We're not worried about labels anymore because we always know we can put a record out. Back in the day, we definitely felt that pressure. But not anymore."

Korn's new album is "The Paradigm Shift," and the band has recently gone through a paradigm shift of its own — with the return of founding member Brian "Head" Welch, whose deep detuned guitars first helped put Korn in the enviable position of not worrying about who buys their albums.

Bonus question

What do you think of today's music?
There's nothing out there that really grabs me right now. The rock world is pretty stagnant. ... When I think of the alternative world, I feel like those days are coming back. It's really new wave-y and different, which I dig, but I don't feel like it's a killer scene.

Tell us about Welch's return.
He showed up at a show we were playing at Carolina Rebellion, and we asked him to come onstage and play a song with us. When he did, the crowd was so emotional. People were crying and so much sh— was going on that I think he realized it was time to come back. ... It's like he never left. It's been really great.

Don Gilmore produced this album. He's been known for working with poppier acts, like Avril Lavigne and Sugar Ray, to name a couple. How was working with him?
We really, really liked working with Don. It was a lot of fun. At first, he was a little hard to read, but we broke him down through the process. That's when he started acting like a kid and having fun with us.

After 20 years as a band, how has your audience evolved?
I think our audience has grown with us. But then also, we have a lot of new fans, too. We see a lot of kids in the crowd as well as older people, so it's really cool. Our music has transferred over a couple decades and touched different people.

THEATER

'The Aurora Project'

Through Oct. 5
Factory Theater
791 Tremont St., Boston
$20, 617-701-7382
www.sftcboston.com
The Science Fiction Theatre Company presents an original play by B.U. alum Bella Poynton. It tells the story of Constantine, a sort of synthetic human, and his genetically enhanced partner, Nora, who contracts a mysterious, incurable disease on an alien planet.

'Word Becomes Flesh'

Sept. 28, 7 p.m.
Blackman Auditorium, Northeastern University
360 Huntington Ave., Boston
$5-$10, 617-373-7098
www.northeastern.edu/camd/cfa/
Employing a fusion of spoken word, dance, hip-hop and live music, this show explores the meaning of black male identity in the 21st century, focusing on issues of race, power and fatherhood — meaty topics all. First performed in 2003, it's been revamped by creator Marc Bamuthi Joseph to reflect the concerns of 2013.

Wong puts the pedal to the metal

Instrumental.
Guitarist doesn't care that you won't listen to the first 10 minutes of his performance.

Wong steps on these pedals to make his guitar sound different. / HIROMI SHINADA

If you think that a solo guitarist with a set of instrumental songs couldn't capture the attention of a big club, Dustin Wong will prove you otherwise.

But it didn't happen overnight. The guitarist spent 10 years on the East Coast (Baltimore with a jaunt in Brooklyn) honing his mesmerizing ambient/classical/post-rock sound before recently moving back to his native Japan, where he began experimenting with music in his teen years.

"No matter what type of music you play, how [you are] going to capture their attention is definitely on musicians' minds," says Wong from Tokyo, where he is preparing for a tour that will bring him to the Paradise on Friday.

"Some people do it performatively. Some people use video. For me, I need to have the melodies capture their attention. The first 10 minutes they won't pay attention — and that's fine, too, because I think that music should work in every level, background and foreground. But then, people start to get curious because all these sounds are coming out and they see it's one person."

It's not hard to understand why audiences would be excited by all that sound emanating from Wong's set-up, which includes a guitar, an amplifier and just enough guitar pedals to fill a briefcase. His latest album, "Meditation of Ecstatic Energy" (Thrill Jockey) is an invigorating display of jaunty melodicism and rhythmic layering that combines warm ambience with the catchiness and virtuosity of a video game symphony. But while speed and timing are tools in his arsenal, Wong's biggest gift as a musician is that he is able to do it all with just one musical instrument.

"Sometimes I get a really synthy sound or if I'm playing high-up with the octave [pedal] up, it sounds like a piano," says the guitarist of combining electric guitar and effects pedals to sound like strings, drums, keys and even voices. Wong's work is something he can really only compare to impressionism.

"I'm not really technical, but I know how to put colors and textures together!"

Horoscope

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Don't fold under pressure. Make decisions for the right reason. You'll get the most out of your day and avoid complaints if you try to do the best job possible.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. You'll have a clear picture of what you want to see unfold today. Rely on your intuition and your keen eye to guide you through any uncertainties you face. You've got the right idea.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Cast your fate to the wind. Pursue an adventure that will take your mind off your worries. Getting perspective on a confusing situation will help you see the light.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. You'll see the need to bring about change, but it may not be as easy you think. Additional responsibilities will become apparent and must be dealt with first. Avoid high-pressure situations.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Do what you can on your own in a work involvement. Avoid depending on others and you'll be free of disappointment.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. It's a good day to spend time with friends or people who inspire and motivate you. An interesting proposal will come from an unusual source. Consider your options.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Revisit old ideas and peers, and you will gain insight into an opportunity. Get your place in shape and host an event.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Take some time out; pampering will do you good and give you a chance to let some information sink in, allowing you to make the most opportune choice.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Stay on top of what's happening at home and at work. Your reputation must be protected, and your decisions must be based on accurate information. Have your facts and figures ready.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Play the game strategically. Whether you are involved in a personal or professional situation that requires hands-on input, you must be cautious, attentive and well-informed.

Use the laws on the books before making new ones

Re: 'Guns in our cities' investigative series (Metro, week of Sept. 23) What is the intention of those behind gun control? Ironically, it is the same of those who are pro-gun. We all want less crime, including violent crime. So the argument becomes how to go about it. One side wants to get rid of the tools of the shooting crime. How come there is no push to ban cars after a drunken driver kills someone? That is the same concept — in that crime the tool is the car. It seems a little far-fetched to try to ban cars because they might be involved in a drunken driving incident.

Focus on the behavior and the criminal. Victims [of violence] like Amy Lord may still be alive had there been stricter punishments and if the state actually forced criminals to be responsible for their actions with tougher penalties (sentences). A slap on the wrist and probation will hardly stop a criminal from repeating. Sadly, not all crime could possibly be prevented, but repeat offenses can easily be curtailed.

JASON LAVESQUE, VIA EMAIL

The politicians who favor more gun control laws refuse to publicly acknowledge that criminals are not deterred by more legislation. Burdening law-abiding citizens with more fees, licenses and ownership requirements is an infringement of their natural right of self defense. There are already enough gun laws on the books at both the federal and local levels. Let's enforce those laws before incorporating new ones. Those who want more control have conveniently forgotten "the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed." More gun laws would, indeed, be an infringement of that right.

With cupcake schedule done, Pats' grind begins in Atlanta

NFL. Here are three things to watch for when the Pats invade Atlanta this week.

The Patriots begin what should be their toughest three-game stretch of the season this week in Atlanta (Sept. 29, 8:30 p.m., NBC), following what was originally thought to be three straight layups Weeks 1 through 3.

The Bills, Jets and Buccaneers certainly don't look like playoff teams by any stretch of the imagination. But all three gave the Pats problems at times this September. In other words, this isn't a 2007-style 3-0 start for New England. Absolutely no one is predicting perfection this time around. In fact, most pundits believe Matt Ryan and crew will be the first team to blemish the Pats' scorecard this season.

Matt Ryan has a 100.4 QB rating this season. / GETTY IMAGES

1 Put Matty on ice

The Patriots' defense looks as good as it has at any time since Bill Belichick hoisted the Lombardi, but Ryan will be the first Pro Bowl-level quarterback the Patriots have seen this season. Ryan can be flustered, and when he is, Atlanta loses. Ryan threw an interception in the Falcons' opener in New Orleans and threw a pick in Miami last week. Atlanta lost both. Ryan did not throw an interception at the Georgia Dome against St. Louis in Week 2, and the Falcons came out winners. The Boston College product is known to force matters when he gets pressure up the middle, so if Vince Wilfork and Tommy Kelly bring their "A" games, the Pats can certainly keep the scoring down.

2 Win on the ground

Even with Shane Vereen on the shelf, the Patriots have a deeper backfield than the Falcons, who will once again be without starter Steven Jackson (hamstring). Jacquizz Rodgers is serviceable for Atlanta, but he has never rushed for more than 100 yards in an NFL game. The Pats ran a trifecta of backs at Tampa Bay last week, with LeGarrette Blount (14 carries, 65 yards), Stevan Ridley (11 carries, 35 yards) and even Brandon Bolden (three carries, 51 yards) sharing the carries.

3 Attack Atlanta's young D

Aside from players like Osi Umenyiora and Asante Samuel, the Falcons' defense is inexperienced, as Atlanta has been forced to start rookies at linebacker and the corner position opposite Samuel. The group allowed more than 400 yards of offense to both the Saints and Rams and were stomped in the late stages of last Sunday's loss to Miami.

FANTASY

ADAM LEVITAN, LIVING THE FANTASY

METRO'S FANTASY GURU BREAKS IT ALL DOWN

NFL news

The Colts say they'll feature an even running back rotation between Trent Richardson and Ahmad Bradshaw. Don't buy it. They gave up a first-round pick for T-Rich because he's the one who's far more likely to get the hot hand they covet.

GOOD TIME TO FLEX SOME MUSCLES

If you have two functioning eyeballs, you know that the NFL is a passing league these days.

Thanks mostly to the gradual wave of rules that favor offenses, we're seeing unprecedented statistics from quarterbacks, receivers and pass-catching running backs. We're also seeing more and more committees in backfields.

So how do we adjust?

Think outside the flex. About five years ago, owners that were deep enough to use a starting running back in their flex spot had a huge advantage. Not anymore.

In half-PPR leagues this year, 15 of the top-25 players are wideouts. Seven are running backs and three are tight ends. Simply put, receivers in general are now scoring more than backs. Think about that when deciding on a close call in your flex.

Second receivers like Michael Floyd are flex fits. / GETTY IMAGES

Theory of relativity. With the way running games are now, there's even more relative value in an elite back. There are really only nine backs that aren't part of a committee: Adrian Peterson, LeSean McCoy, Matt Forte, Doug Martin, Marshawn Lynch, Jamaal Charles, Maurice Jones-Drew, Darren McFadden and DeMarco Murray.

Taking shots. The other reason wideouts can be so effective in a flex spot is because the No. 2 or 3 guys get chances. While we know a second back like Ben Tate is capped at 12 touches, a second receiver like Michael Floyd is prone to go off at any time. We saw it in Week 3, when Santonio Holmes ripped through the Bills and Denarius Moore got lucky against the Broncos. There are more big plays in the passing game and more chances for fluky yet monstrous stat lines.
